- A crescent shaped section of the Charlotte MSA, studied over the 2002-2008 period, consistently lags in household income, school performance, education levels and home values.
- Area development has grown and improved outside of the crescent shape, concentrating in areas such as South Charlotte, Union County, Lake Wylie and Lake Norman, and the light rail corridor.
- The planning and improvement of city streets has an important role in planning area development and attracting commercial as well as residential development.
